BITTER BATTLE IS RAGING ON DNEIPER BANKS

Retreat of Germans Developing Into Rout on Parts of 750-mile Front in Russia—Heavy Casualties Inflicted on Invader Horde by Victorious Soviet Armies— Fight in Kuban

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Red army units were battling for footholds across the broad Dnieper River today as the Germans reeled westward in retreat along a smoking front which a Soviet communique said extended from the Kuban bridgehead 750 miles northward to war-ravaged Smolensk.

The glittering domes of Kiev, a hallowed city of Russia, lay under Soviet siege guns on the eastern bank of the Dnieper with the Polish frontier 100 miles beyond, while at least a half-dozen other key towns along the river appeared ripe to fall to the Red army as Nazi resistance continued to crumble.

By WASH. FAYETTE

There are a lot of things that might shake our faith in humanity if we did not know people as we do.

You see there are some people in whom we do not have a great deal of faith, and when they disappoint us, we accept it as a matter of course, and are not very badly disappointed.

One night about 10 days ago while at the City Building I met three men from out-of-state who were wanting jobs of cutting corn. I called a farmer friend of mine who resides five miles north of the city and placed one of the men on the phone to talk with him. I was not surprised at the first words of the man.

"What are you paying?" he asked. Anyway he made a deal with the farmer who was to come after the trio the following morning. When the farmer drove up after them they had just concluded making a deal with another farmer, and drove away with the other man. So much for helping them out!

It reminds me that years ago a police chief from a neighboring city, whom I knew quite well, dropped into the office one day, returning from Columbus where he apparently had been on a carousal, and said: "Loan me a dollar until I get home."

I loaned him the dollar, but I guess he never got home.

Another time two men were enroute back to their former home in southern Ohio. They had been in the Kansas "dust bowl" and were flat broke. They wanted money to buy gasoline to get them back to friends in southern Ohio.

I bought the gasoline for them. "We'll send the money to you as soon as we reach our relatives," one of them said. Poor men! They never reached their relatives.

But as I said at the start, one does not lose faith in humanity just because there are some not worthy of one's faith, for you know, "hope springs eternal in the human breast."

I have noticed two or three big pumpkins on display in some of the windows in places of business, and those big fellows would lead one to believe that the crop this year is going to be a big one, although I understand such is not the case, at least in some parts of the community.

That reminds me that one year a farmer in Paint Township plowed up a field that had been in blue grass sod for a quarter of a century or more, and planted it to corn. He had an abundance of pumpkin seed so he also planted pumpkins in the entire field.

Well, it was an ideal year for growing pumpkins, and every vine seemed to bear from three to a half dozen sizeable pumpkins, with the result that in harvesting the corn the workmen fell over pumpkins at every turn.

When the corn was cut the field looked like it had smallpox, for there were thousands of pumpkins, some even larger than the ones now on display here.

The farmer sold, gave away and fed to his livestock some 40 wagon loads of pumpkins, and was then forced to cut the field both ways with a disc harrow before he could sow wheat. Even then the man operating the drill had to stop at frequent intervals and remove pumpkins from in front of the drill.

It was the first time I ever knew of anyone having a larger crop of pumpkins than he knew what to do with, and I am certain that the crop on that one 40 acre field would have kept the Fayette canning plant busy at least a week to pack it.

Nazis Hurry Ukraine Harvest with Enslaved Russians as Red Army Drives Ahead

Child, Abnormal Mentally, Electrocuted in Home

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Sept. 27.—(AP)—John F. Noxon, Jr., 45, prominent Pittsfield attorney, was arrested today and charged with murder of his six-months old son, Lawrence, whom Police Chief John L. Sullivan described as being abnormal mentally.

Chief Sullivan said that the child was electrocuted on Thursday in the library of the Noxon home while the father was fixing the radio. The baby suffered a third degree burn on the left arm.

Medical Examiner Albert England and Dr. Alan R. Moritz, state police pathologist, said, after an autopsy, that electrocution caused death.

Chief Sullivan said that the father, who is now being held in Pittsfield police headquarters, would be arraigned on the murder charge tomorrow.

Italy Hot Potato For Allies; Troops Want No Part Of Ex-Foe

By EDWARD KENNEDY

SOMEWHERE IN SOUTHERN ITALY, Sept. 21.—(Delayed)—(AP)—The Badoglio government, now established in southern Italy, seems determined to force itself upon the United Nations as an ally, but American and British soldiers here are frankly unenthusiastic about welcoming the Italians as comrades in arms.

It would not be surprising if Premier Badoglio actually issued a declaration of war on Germany as a means of getting into the winning camp and salvaging something in the post-war settlement.

The idea of accepting the Italians as "allies," however, is repugnant to many of the troops, who thought they had defeated the Italians once and for all and now find it strange to have Italians in charge of civil administration here and issuing decrees which indirectly affect the Allied forces.

Badoglio, along with King Vittorio Emanuele and Crown Prince

Umberto, now are established in a southern Italian town which is in effect the provisional capital of Italy. Badoglio has his own army with arms, including artillery, and his government is permitted the use of the Bari radio.

Officers of the Allied military government of occupied territories (AMG) who came here to administer the country have found their organization side-tracked while Italians control the civil power, and they are resentful of the situation. At least one high AMG officer has resigned, and others lounge about, saying: "Well, this is a pretty comic war. We came here to do a job, but find we are not allowed to do it."

Farmer-To-Consumer Plan Hits Living Cost

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 27.—(AP)—They haven't whipped the high cost of living in this war boomtown, but they're giving produce prices a terrific beating.

They're doing it with a city-sponsored farmer-to-consumer market plan founded on the mutual ire of a lot of people.

Shipyards workers growled because fruits and vegetables were gone by the time they got to stores. Housewives protested high retail prices. Farmers fumed that wholesale channels weren't paying enough to make harvesting worth while.

Amid this clamor, Albina Engine and Machine Works invited farmers to bring their stuff right to the shipyard gates. The farmers came. The workers bought everything in sight.

Then things happened fast. Multnomah County Agent S. B.

Hall demanded something be done to give farmers more of a cut out of skyhigh retail prices.

Aroused, the OPA moved in, citing scores of retailers for overcharging. Commissioner Kenneth L. Cooper went into action at the city hall.

Cooper emerged with a plan for rotating farmers' markets on three vacant lots in widely separated sections of the city. Plenty of customers but few farmers showed up the first day. More of both were on hand next day.

But the third day, the innovation took hold.

Now farmers, eager to sell at higher than wholesale prices, are coming from 60 miles around. Customers, happy to be paying less than established retail prices, are buying tons of produce that would have rotted for lack of a market.

Successor to Welles To Go To Three-power Conference in Moscow With Hull

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., took over the nation's second highest diplomatic post today amid capital speculation that his appointment indicated important developments are forthcoming in the foreign field.

Stettinius, lend-lease administrator, succeeds Sumner Welles as undersecretary of state. He is expected to accompany Secretary Hull to Moscow next month to meet Russian and British foreign ministers preliminary to a conference of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

Stettinius, who sent vast quantities of lend-lease supplies to the Soviets, has gained widespread popularity in Moscow, and diplomatic sources here viewed his appointment as a strong bid for full Russian cooperation in postwar planning.

On Capitol Hill, the Stettinius appointment was applauded by members of both major parties.

NEW RECORD IS SET BY YANK AIR FORCE

Flying Fortresses Smash Nazi North Sea Base

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—American Flying Fortresses, carrying U. S. Air Force operations in Britain to a new month's record reached more than 200 miles across the North Sea early today and bombed Emden, the great German shipbuilding center.

This second stab by the Fortresses in two days hit the Nazis' nearest submarine and shipping base and the receiving port for Scandinavian ore.

The raid was the 10th this month for the Fortresses which thus equalled the number of missions performed by the four-engined giants in the peak month of July. With the 19 attacks this month by U. S. Marauder medium bombers—compared with only six in July—U. S. operations reached far above any previous level.

GERMAN FORCES BACKING UP BUT FIGHT FIERCELY

Hitler's Troops Retreating From Area Around Sea As Yanks Slash Ahead

BERLIN ADMITS THREATS

British Armies Moving In Without Meeting More Than Token Resistance

By AUSTIN BEALMAR

(By The Associated Press)

German troops began withdrawing today from the sea around Naples as American Fifth Army forces slashed another 10 miles into the mountains to capture the town of Cassano, 50 miles straight east of Italy's second greatest port.

Front dispatches said the Germans had started retreating from positions around the broad Bay of Naples and the port itself and were offering only rearward opposition. When slackening German artillery fire signaled the withdrawal, the Americans immediately began pressing the retreating enemy.

Allied headquarters announced meanwhile that British troops driving swiftly up Italy's Adriatic coast against little enemy opposition were within 22 miles of Foggia and its vital air base system which the Germans already have abandoned.

Thus in 24 days the American and British invasion forces have pushed up approximately one-sixth the length of the Italian peninsula.

In its broadcast communique, the German high command admitted that Nazi troops on the eastern side of the mainland were retreating "undisturbed by the enemy" after destroying traffic installations but declared that attacks northwest and northeast of Salerno were repulsed.

By taking Cassano, American troops holding the right flank of the Fifth Army advanced to a point 18 miles northeast of Salerno and only 10 miles from Avellino, one of the enemy's major communications centers.

While the German withdrawal northeast of Salerno gave the Americans an opportunity to drive a wedge between the enemy's forces there and those closer to Naples, the fighting on the coast north and northwest of Salerno was bitter and at close quarters.

Reports from the front said that the battle was fiercer than anything seen in the Middle East, North Africa or Sicily since the British breakthrough at El Alamein and that three or four miles of rough mountain country had to be taken by British units on the Fifth Army's left flank before they could reach the Naples plain.

"This fighting resembles some of the historic battles of the first World War when strongpoints in some sectors had to be taken by hard frontal assault," said an

NEW ROAD TO TOKYO CUTTING INTO BURMA

American Force Overcomes Hills and Highwater

By PRESTON GROVER

AN AMERICAN BASE ON THE INDIA-BURMA FRONTIER, Sept. 25.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Despite hills and high water, American army engineers—assisted by Indians and Chinese—have hacked a roadway through the jungle from India into Burma along which, if God and the strategists are willing, an attack upon the Japanese may be launched.

Headquarters calls the highway the Leda Road, but engineers on the job call it the "Tokyo Road," because, said Major John Moyer of Tuskegee, Ala., "the stuff transported over it eventually will wind up in Japan"—now some 3,000 miles away.

The road already has penetrated into enemy territory and Chinese soldiers, led and trained by American officers, are fighting the Japanese back further, as construction progresses.

Silence on Policy Broken with Strong Statement

BUENO AIRES, Sept. 27.—(AP)—A British foreign office statement expressing strong disapproval of Argentina's neutrality policy struck a sharp blow today at Axis propagandists here.

Nazi sympathizers long have conducted a whispering campaign that Britain regarded Argentina's failure to break relations with the Axis with complacency if not approval.

The statement from London, however, left no doubt about Britain's true position.

"His majesty's government hope that in the international sphere the Argentine government will at an early date range herself wholeheartedly on the side of the freedom loving nations," said the statement.

Veteran of Guadalcanal Dies In California After Operation

Word has been received of the death of Manuel Stewart, U. S. Marine, veteran of the Southwest Pacific campaign. He died Thursday in a U. S. Army Hospital at Carona, California, following an operation for tumor on the brain, from which he had suffered for many months. Stewart was stricken with yellow fever while in the Guadalcanal fighting zone, after he had seen some of the thickest of the fighting and had won recognition by slaying three Japs who attacked him. The brain tumor was said to have been an outgrowth of the yellow fever and he had been in the hospital in California, his condition gradually growing worse, and his sight was nearly gone before the surgeons decided to operate for removal of the tumor. His father, George Stewart, and sister, Mrs. Gladys Lininger, of Marion Township, went by plane last week to see him before the operation and remained until his death. He was operated upon Tuesday and died Thursday. His father and sister are now accompanying the body back to New Holland. Manuel Stewart was one of the first Fayette countians to enlist in the war and had seen much service in the southwest Pacific before he became ill. He was treated near the scene of action for some time, then removed to the hospital in California.

(Continued From Page One) Russell Ramsey of Sandusky in the landing on New Georgia early in July. "Colonel Ramsey and myself selected the site for the divisional command post 300 yards from the front and it was perhaps the most advanced command post in the war," he said. He commended the leadership of Lieut. Col. Richard D. Crooks of Ellyria, whose outfit captured a strongly-defended enemy hill. "People ask what the boys want and need most," he said, "and I tell them—letters, letters and more letters." "Our men were beset by withering heat, flies and other insects that made life almost unbearable—but they came through beautifully. They plodded through mud up to their hips, fighting and sleeping in almost constant tropical downpours of rain, existing upon meager rations, fighting unseen enemies hidden in trees and employed in well-constructed pill-boxes. "Many of them lie buried there in the jungles of New Georgia. Others rest in cemeteries carved out of the jungle." "Medical care was excellent and army doctors worked day and night caring for our men," he added. "I saw blood plasma given under all kinds of circumstances and it was almost miraculous in saving lives. Our chaplains performed magnificently—going unarmed into the thick of battle to tend the wounded or dying, whether Protestant, Catholic or Jew."

themselves is expressed in a remarkably outspoken article in the British Eighth Army news.

"Italy surrendered unconditionally," the news said. "... What do we find? The Italians are our allies. They therefore claim to exercise independence in internal affairs. A soldier who wishes to change his British occupation money finds it hard, if not impossible, to do so. The Italians are quibbling about the rate of 400 lire to the pound sterling. ...

"Many Italians, in fact, are under the impression that because they say, 'Now we are your allies,' they are going to spare their country the retribution which a just victory normally demands of a defeated army and which a defeated army expects to make.

"With all due sympathy for Italian sufferers under their self-chosen German friends, we should set their minds straight on this."

REDS DRIVE NAZIS BACK TO OUTSKIRTS OF KIEV BITTER BATTLE RAGES

Russians said the Germans had begun to withdraw from the city, third largest in Russia.

The Russians admitted that they were meeting stubborn German resistance in the Dnepropetrovsk area, where they said more than 1,000 Nazis had died in a futile attempt to recapture several strongpoints yielded in yesterday's battle.

Other Soviet forces under General Vassily Sikolovsky were battling their way toward the river near Gomel.

In the Smolensk area the Russians swept forward six miles toward Vitebsk on the edge of White Russia, west and slightly north of Smolensk, fall of which was announced Saturday.

The column advancing toward Mogilev still had 55 miles to go to reach the Dnieper and detachments operating out of Roslavl took Glinkovka, 12 miles to the west, in addition to 250 other populated localities.

Far to the south the Russians were busily engaged in a campaign to smash the Nazis' tenuous hold on the Kuban bridgehead across the narrow strait separating Crimea from the Caucasus. The communiqué said that Soviet units had driven the Germans from four more villages.

Allied military spokesman.

A communiqué from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said the town of Cerignola, about six miles above the Ofanto River in the southern Foggia plain, fell to the British Eighth Army in its latest thrust. A Cairo broadcast placed the Eighth Army vanguard within 18 miles of Foggia.

The capture of Foggia's main air field, well equipped for all kinds of day and night operations, and its 12 satellite landing strips would give the Allies a valuable base from which their bombers could attack the enemy at any point in the Balkans and as far north as Germany itself.

Lt. Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth Army units also captured Calabritto, another town northeast of Salerno and 27 miles from the coast, while Muro, 18 miles northwest of Potenza and 32 miles east of Salerno, was overrun by British troops moving up on the Eighth Army's left flank.

The headquarters communiqué said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's troops in the center of the solid Allied line extending from the Tyrrhenian to the Adriatic were "still in contact with the enemy just north of Atella," the capture of which was announced yesterday.

Dispatches to London from a Reuters correspondent with the Fifth Army said British naval units had joined in the battle for the mountain passes leading to Naples, blasting German positions from off shore while American and British artillery pounded the enemy from behind the Allied lines.

Anniversary Used To Warn Other Satellites

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The two surviving Axis partners—Germany and Japan—observed the third anniversary of the signing of the tripartite pact today by putting on a show of unconcern over Italy's capitulation, but with a warning to satellite powers not to follow the Italian lead.

It'll cost you an extra $100 Bond to look him in the eye!

HE'S AN AMERICAN SOLDIER.

Some day, if God is with him, he'll come home.

And when he does, you'll get the biggest thrill of your life if you can look him squarely in the eye and say, "I couldn't help you fight—but I did everything in my power to help you win!"

There's only one way you can say that . . . honestly say it. And that is to help him win now . . . when he needs all the help you can give him.

Today's particular job for you is to scrape together every dollar you can—and buy an extra $100 worth of War Bonds! That's your job in the 3rd War Loan!

It's not enough to buy your regular amount of Bonds. It has to be more. It has to be an extra buy—a little more pressure for the shoulder that's against the wheel.

REMEMBER THIS—you aren't giving your money. You're lending it to the government for a while. And you're making the best investment in the world.

A SIGNIFICANT SIGN

Something new in the way of questionnaire surveys is the one made by a large eastern aircraft corporation which queried its employees on some of their innermost thoughts.

The results are most interesting. To the question, "Do you think the top management of the company is competent, sincere, interested in you?" the answers were far in the affirmative. And when asked, "What is the most serious problem this company and its employees must overcome to make the greatest possible contribution to victory?" employees listed shortage of materials, absenteeism, and inadequacy of trained personnel as the chief problems.

Other questions were: "What do you think can accomplish most toward building 'morale'—the will to work to win—among employees?"

"How do you feel about possible enemy attacks on this plant?"

"There are all brands of foremen; what do you think of yours?"

"Do you think the majority of your fellow employees are competent, sincere, doing their best?"

"If you were hired within the past year were you courteously treated by the personnel office, the plant police, your fellow workers? Were you placed on the job for which best fitted? Is the personnel department aiding you?"

"Are you receiving enough gasoline for necessary driving to and from work?"

There were many more questions of a similar pertinent nature.

The answers were most gratifying to the company. They showed a staff of employees for the most part well pleased with the company policy and procedure, and fully conscious of the problems of war production in their plant.

Aside from this, however, the survey is most significant. The very fact that it was made shows cognizance on the part of modern industrial management of the problems that beset the war worker. The effort expended in this survey shows most convincingly that industry is anxious to enlist the wholehearted aid of its employees in creating better understanding and in solving mutual problems.

A GOOD START

A recent New York Times story from Chicago says that Chester Bowles, acting administrator of the OPA, said in an interview that merchants should be protected against "needless meddling, snooping and gestapo methods." That is good news to hundreds of thousands of merchants who have been doing their level best to help carry out the complicated and multitudinous OPA rulings. The American people do not like snoopers and persecutors.

Merchants and consumers alike know that the OPA must be supported. Anything Mr. Bowles can do to simplify OPA methods and conduct its operations along truly American lines of fair play, will

Flashes of Life

If You Can't Get Clock, Just Get Married

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Many Sydney women have to stay awake half of the night to make sure their husbands get up in time for work because of an acute shortage of alarm clocks.

More than 25,000 alarm clocks could be sold immediately in New South Wales if they were available, a city jeweler said. His firm receives about 100 inquiries daily for alarm clocks of all kinds—many from wives wanting to end their early morning vigils.

Some women say they depend on the baby to cry and wake them up. The main cause of the shortage was that most of the clock factories in America and Canada switched over to war work.

One-Minute Test

1. Which state of the Union was originally known as the state of Deseret?
2. Before the present war, what countries owned the islands of Malta, Crete, the Dodecanese and Cyprus?
3. How did the United States acquire the Virgin Islands?

Words of Wisdom

Suspicion is far more apt to be wrong than right; oftener unjust than just. It is no friend to virtue, and always an enemy to happiness.—H. Ballou.

Hints on Etiquette

Don't pity yourself—ever. You may gain sympathy for a while from good-natured people, but you will eventually be considered a bore—and rightly so.

One-Minute Test Answers

1. Utah.
2. Malta belonged and still belongs to Britain. Crete to Greece. Dodecanese to Italy; and Cyprus to Britain.
3. The Virgin Islands were purchased from Denmark in 1917, for $25,000,000.

gain public approval and cooperation.

Mr. Bowles would have to spend a week in a grocery store to find out what the local merchant is up against in trying to comply with OPA regulations. It is almost a safe bet that neither Mr. Bowles nor any of his official family would attempt to read or comply with the blanks and forms with which the average merchant is bombarded by the OPA, without consulting a lawyer—and the small merchant has no lawyer.

An outstanding food store authority says more than 7,800 pages, averaging at least 2,000 words each, must be comprehended and complied with by food retailers. How many OPA officials, with no customers clamoring to be waited on, or ration stamps to sort, could read, much less comprehend such an overwhelming array of regulations and red tape?

Surely there is some way to simplify, rather than complicate OPA practices, in the interest of the producers, the merchants, and the consumers.

SEEING WITH BRUTISH EYES

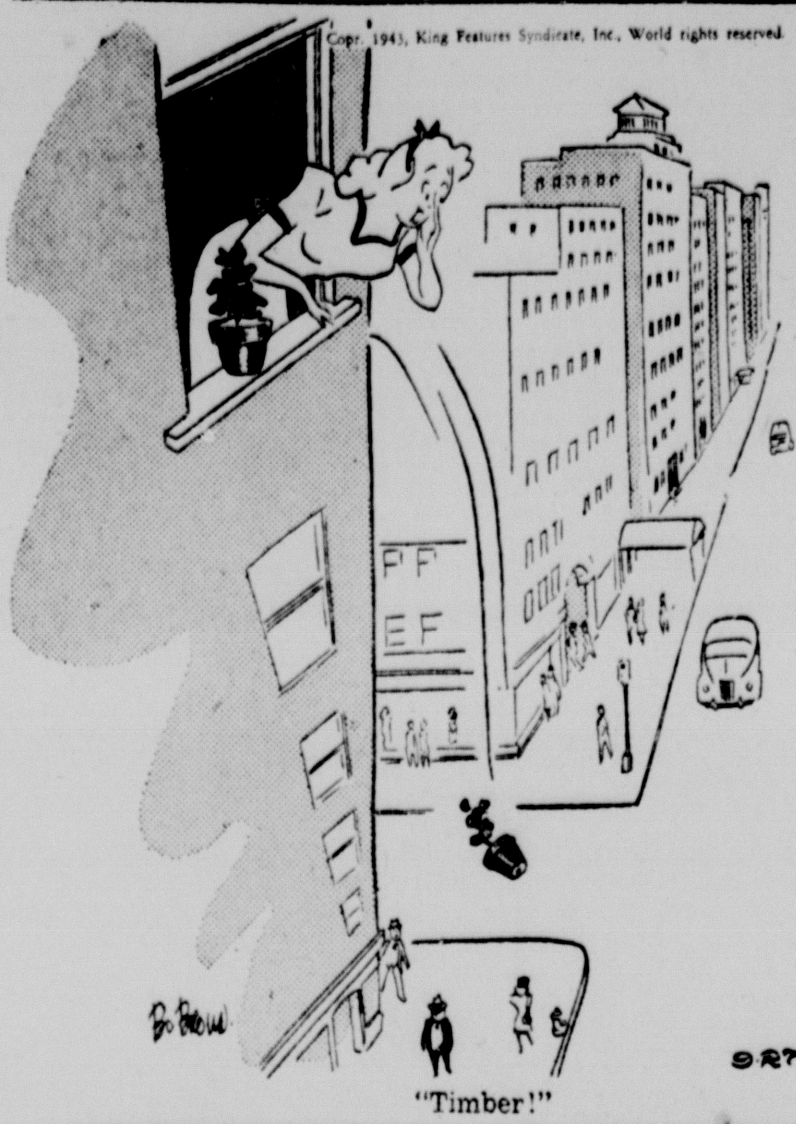

Mussolini, says that universal authority, Adolph Hitler, is the greatest man Italy has produced since Julius Caesar.

If this statement deserves more than a smile, it shows Hitler's mental limitations. Long after the balcony-strutting Mussolini has ceased to be even a footnote in the pages of history, the world will be moved by the majesty of Dante's poetry and the great Italian artists. And Hitler might well have remembered the great ecclesiastical figures of the Middle Ages.

He probably has heard of them, but dismissed them because their empire is not built on force. While the Nazis have used ideas as a substitute, force is their fundamental weapon and their god. How to a Nazi could Dante or Michelangelo rank with a plug-ugly?

Respiratory Ills Spread Through Air

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE ARE entering the period of the year when the most serious national health problem always arises—that of the infectious and contagious respiratory diseases. In earlier days of the republic there was no let-up in health problems—it was dysentery in the summer, and pneumonia in the winter. But better methods of prevention—refrigeration—and better, and especially cleaner methods of preparation of food have eliminated the summer problem, and we have only the winter problem of respiratory infection.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Why should these respiratory infections be more common in the winter? The easy answer is to say, "Cold and damp." There is some relationship between the chilling of the body surface and susceptibility of infection of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. Well, undoubtedly that is partly true, but only partly. Other and more important factors are that we are indoors more in the winter, we are in closer contact with each other, in school, room, and in office and factory the windows are apt to be closed, there are no electric fans going to change the atmosphere, and so on.

Air-Borne Infection

There has been a great deal of intensive research in the last ten years or more on the dynamics of air-borne infection. It is now generally conceded that respiratory disease is spread by droplet infection. The germs that cause the respiratory diseases are light and float for long periods in the air. A person with a cold, sneezes or coughs and there is a spray into the atmosphere that is astonishing when photographed, as was done by Turner and his fellow workers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Most of the droplets are small and the moisture quickly evaporates, leaving the germ in the air to hang in the air for hours, alive and ready to do business.

In all hospitals today cases of pneumonia, etc., are curtailed off so as to prevent droplet infection from getting into the room. The attendants and the patient, unless he is too sick, are required to wear a gauze mask over the nose and mouth. If we could persuade every cougher and sneezer this winter to put a handkerchief in front of his mouth or nose whenever he feels inclined to indulge, at least indoors, we could do much to cut down the high incidence of winter disease.

Sterilizing Air

"Mastery of the Air" is the motto of the respiratory hygienist, as it is of the aviation corps. The best method of sterilizing the air of an office or hospital ward is by ultra-violet radiation. Chemical methods by spray are not very effective, and are likely to be irritating.

The Commonwealth Fund has granted the University of Pennsylvania a research endowment for the study of air-borne infection. The studies there indicate that the spread of infection depends on deficiency of air supplied. So when the fresh air flaps open the window in the office and someone shouts, "Do you want to give me my death of cold?" he may well reply, "No, I want to give you your life free from pneumonia."

The ultra-violet radiation of movie houses, offices, school-rooms and factory rooms at night may come into use as a hygienic requirement.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. V.—How does a person tell if he has high blood pressure before an instrumental test is made?

Answer: He doesn't. It is almost, symptomless, except perhaps for an occasional spell of vertigo. It might be better for most people if they never found out what the instrument says.

Officers don't talk much about it, but the fact is that from Major on down they have to exercise a degree of thrift which they doubt is equalled by that of American officers anywhere else.

It is true that the Post Exchanges have low prices on what they sell—for example, American cigarettes at 10 cents a package. But the limit on cigarettes is seven packs a week. A fairly heavy smoker accustomed to handing them around the circle has got to piece this ration out with British cigarettes.

Popular British cigarettes cost about 50 cents.

Eating outside the officers' mess is a highly expensive business.

Dinner for one in an acceptable place for one pound—the current equivalent of $4.04—is considered not at all unreasonable and to this must be added a tip which by British custom runs to about two shillings, or 40 cents, for each person.

CHAPTER TWENTY

BILL WASN'T the only person who would like to have seen Adam North cast opposite someone other than Susan. Jack Vinton felt the same way about it—only he wouldn't have wanted him cast opposite Ruth Moorehouse. His idea of perfect casting would be Brenda in Susan's role, and Adam North cast just as he was now—in the masculine lead. It would have been an ideal arrangement, he thought.

Once Adam started rehearsing those love scenes with Brenda Leigh, he would realize how pleasant it was to kiss her, hold her in his arms, and probably out of the play would come a real romance. Then he could stop worrying about Ruth and Adam, could get rid of those gnawing little worries that had to do with the possibility of Ruth eventually becoming Adam's wife—maybe after he had gone off to war, and Adam was left behind to see Ruth day in and day out.

Ruth was sweet and appealing, and Adam couldn't go on forever being blind to that fact. Besides, Ruth was making herself indispensable to him, was learning the factory business from A to Z. Maybe Adam would end up marrying her because he couldn't get along without her. "Then where will I be?" Jack mused unhappily.

He was thinking along those lines that evening as he took Ruth home after the rehearsal.

"Why so silent?" Ruth asked suddenly.

"Thinking," said Jack. "And don't you have any doubts about my having a lot to think about."

"I haven't," said Ruth gently, as she laid her hand on Jack's where it held the wheel of his car. "What with things as they are at the factory, and your being called any day."

"That's not all," said Jack.

"What else?"

"You—and Adam—and me."

"Oh!" said Ruth.

"Why so silent?" said Jack, when they had driven some distance without speaking.

"Thinking," answered Ruth.

"And you're not the only one who has a lot to think about." She slumped down in the seat. "Of all the silly casting ideas, Mrs. Platt's certainly got them. She might as well throw Adam at Susan Potter and be done with it."

"Umhm," said Jack. "And maybe I don't live right. Anyway, my prayers go unanswered."

"What prayers?"

"Those about Adam and Brenda. If prayers were answered properly, Brenda would have been given the role Susan Potter has, and then—"

"Don't be silly. Brenda goes in for writing and directing, not acting."

"Just the same," said Jack. "She's the girl Adam ought to be rehearsing love scenes with, and not Susan." He shook his head slowly. "Only I must admit he takes to the part like a duck to water. Heaven knows what'll happen when we really get down to business—and rehearsal without holding our parts in one hand. I only wish you and I had some scenes like those Adam and Susan have."

"We couldn't, being cast as brother and sister."

"That's what I mean. I wish we weren't cast in parts like those." Jack steered the car off the wide street they were traversing and turned into one that was little more than a lane. "We swap enough in real life without having to do it as brother and sister on the stage."

"Where're you going?" Ruth asked.

"Just taking you for a little extra ride," he replied. "You know, the longest way around being the shortest way home, or however it goes."

Ruth said nothing for a moment.

"Jack," she began, when the car was rolling along a country road, "I've been doing a lot of thinking here of late."

"Who hasn't?"

"I mean about us—and the war. It's no time to get married—with things as they are. I know perfectly well you'll get around to the subject as soon as you can get me out to your favorite spot for proposing—and I want to forestall you."

"Any time is the time to get married," said Jack. "If two people love each other—and were meant to be married—from the beginning of time."

"I don't think so. And since that scare we had at the factory, I'm sure we ought to wait—that is, if we do marry."

"How long?"

"Until the war is over—and things get back to normal."

"That may be for years."

"I know it."

"Now listen, Ruth, I—"

"No, let me talk, Jack," the girl cut in. "I hate to have you go off—"

"You know that—but I'd rather you went free of any incumbrances."

"Meaning just what?"

"Meaning a wife."

Jack grinned. "Incumbrance is a new name for a man's wife," he said. Then, seriously, "I'd rather go away knowing you'd promised to love me until death did part—even if it did part us—than to leave you free to forget about me and marry someone else."

"Nobody else wants to marry me."

"That's just it," said Ruth. "But about us," she went on. "Ever since that awful note was dropped in the factory yard I've thought about the women and children—and how terrible it would be if—if they were killed or mutilated. And it's just not right, Jack, for people to marry—and have children. It's no sort of world to bring them into, and you know it."

"Maybe you're right," said Jack. "But what are folks supposed to do—just stop marrying and having families?"

"Maybe," answered Ruth. "Anyway, I don't think any more people should be born into the world until those already in it learn how to manage things better than they have been managing them. One war after another—shooting—bombing—"

"She put her hands over her face and shuddered. "What is going to come out of it all, Jack?"

"I don't know, honey," Jack said. "But certainly something worth while. All the old world is going through is bound to result in something good. Lord knows it couldn't be anything worse. And I reckon things always take a turn for the better sooner or later."

He drew Ruth's head down to his shoulder, kissed her cheek. "Don't let it get you down, sweetheart. He tried to smile and be a bit funny. "One thing you can count on—the war is booked to end pretty soon after I get into it!"

Ruth straightened up. "Give me your handkerchief," she said, and helped herself to the one in Jack's breast pocket. "Thanks," she said as she dried her eyes. "You are a comfort. And I should be comforting you, not you me. After all, it's you who may have to go, not I."

"So what? Staying behind and working in a factory is no cinch."

"But I'd rather be working there than just sitting around home," said Ruth.

"Sure. Nothing like being occupied—since time passes a lot quicker."

Army Officers in Britain Have Worries

LONDON—Desk and staff officers here who operate the great headquarters of the American drive in the European theater have budget troubles as sharp as those of any American housewife back home.

Through no one fault, but by the impact of an immense effort drawing men here from around the world, this city—staid and gracious old London—has to its own astonishment taken on some of the difficulties of an oil boom town.

Living, despite the long and mainly successful British effort to keep prices from getting out of hand, is tremendously expensive.

Officers don't talk much about it, but the fact is that from Major on down they have to exercise a degree of thrift which they doubt is equalled by that of American officers anywhere else.

It is true that the Post Exchanges have low prices on what they sell—for example, American cigarettes at 10 cents a package. But the limit on cigarettes is seven packs a week. A fairly heavy smoker accustomed to handing them around the circle has got to piece this ration out with British cigarettes.

Popular British cigarettes cost about 50 cents.

Eating outside the officers' mess is a highly expensive business.

Dinner for one in an acceptable place for one pound—the current equivalent of $4.04—is considered not at all unreasonable and to this must be added a tip which by British custom runs to about two shillings, or 40 cents, for each person.

Officers say that nearly all of of anything like a cocktail or wine—which really run high.

(By British regulation there is a five shilling, or one dollar, legal limit on the price of a meal but this does not mean much in the face of extra charges for coffee, salad, "service" and so forth.)

Prices for items which the government deems not essential and thus not covered by any legal price ceiling—climb to rather astonishing altitudes. For example, one might be asked $4.20 for a single canteen, or more than a dollar for a single peach.

Suitable quarters for an officer living alone can hardly be found for less than $5 a day; an officer sharing an apartment with other officers can manage on about $3 a day, but not much less.

Mild entertainment requires much shelling out. A single seat in an ordinary first-run movie will run up to $2.50.

Against all those facts are these: A Major's living allowance is $6 a day. It is $5 for Captain, and so on down.

Officers say that nearly all of them must dig deeply into their pay—which is modest, running to about $265 a month in the case of a second Lieutenant maintaining a wife and home in America—to live on even the minimum scale.

Helene Tefft Becomes Bride Of Robert Spahr Sanderson Saturday in Columbus

One of the loveliest of the early fall weddings which took place Saturday evening in First Community Church, united in marriage Miss Helene Tefft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Forrest Tefft, 2035 Guilford Road, and Mr. Robert Spahr Sanderson, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spahr Sanderson of Washington Court House. The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock by the bride's brother, the Rev. C. Brandt Tefft, rector of the Red Bank Village Church at South Portland, Me.

The church was lighted by softly gleaming candles placed at intervals down the center aisle and in seven-branch candelabra on the altar where the whiteness of chrysanthemums and gladioli was enhanced by a background of huckleberry and woodwardia.

For her marriage Miss Tefft chose a period gown of heavy ivory satin. Dainty chintilly lace outlined the modified sweetheart neckline and trimmed the three-quarter length sleeves. A ruffle of the same lace on each side of the very full skirt formed a front panel effect and lace also edged the skirt bottom and the long graceful train. Her bridal veil of illusion with orange blossom-trimmed cap was first worn by Mrs. William Livingston, the former Miss Lana Sanor and her bouquet was of white roses and stephanotis centered with white orchids.

Identical gowns of dahlia rose faille taffeta were worn by the four attendants. Miss Joyce Tefft, who served as maid of honor for her sister; Mrs. William Livingston, Miss Margaret Gilfillan and Miss Marjorie Sanborn. The frocks were styled with bouffant skirts, low waistlines and closely fitted bodices. A pleated taffeta ruffle, with front bow, outlined each sweetheart neckline and completing their ensembles were bouquets of miniature dahlias in soft pastel shades. The same flowers perched in each gleaming coiffure.

Mr. Henry Houston of Urbana, Ohio, acted as best man for Mr. Sanderson and seating the wedding guests were Mr. Philip W. Tefft, the bride's brother; Mr. Earl Hamilton, Mr. William Nichols of Lakewood, Ohio and Pfc. Richard Lorey.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Tefft were hosts at a reception at the Faculty Club decorated for the occasion with a profusion of brilliant fall flowers. Mrs. Tefft chose for her daughter's marriage a gown whose skirt of ice-blue chiffon was topped by a back crepe bodice trimmed with ice blue beading. An orchid was pinned at her shoulder. The bridegroom's mother was in a dinner gown of black crepe, its aqua yoke embroidered in aqua and gold beads. Her corsage also was of orchids.

When, later in the evening, the bride and bridegroom left for a short wedding trip to Chicago, she had changed to a trim frock of smoke-gray crepe. Style features of the dress were its high round neckline, long tight sleeves and unpressed pleat in the skirt front which revealed an inset of shining black satin. A touch of color was furnished by her pale orchid corsage. After October 1 the couple will be at home here at 1792 Northwest Blvd.

The bride is a graduate of Ohio State University and a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Mr. Sanderson also was graduated from Ohio State where he became a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity. He is now employed by the Columbus Coated Fabrics Company.

Gradale Convention Is Held in Columbus

The seventh annual Gradale convention was held September 25th and 26th at the Fort Hayes Hotel, in Columbus, and hostesses for the affair were the Alpha and Beta chapters of Marion, Ohio.

Those attending from the local chapter were Mr. and Mrs. William McCoy, Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Marting, Mr. and Mrs. Emery Lynch, Mr. Keith Garringer and Miss Evelyn Mossbarger.

A formal banquet and dance was held Saturday evening in the Crystal Ballroom of the hotel, which the members and their escorts attended. A delightful luncheon was served Sunday in the Gold Room, and was followed by a general business meeting and installation of state officers.

Base Stealing and Homers Hold Interest in Majors

By TED MEIER
(By The Associated Press)

Outside of debating the relative merits of the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees in the coming World Series, interest in the major leagues shifted today to the George Case-Wally Moses base stealing race and the Rudy York-Charley Keller struggle for the home run championship.

Case, fleet outfielder for the Washington Senators, stole three sacks yesterday to go one up on his rival from the Chicago White Sox. He has swiped 56 to 55 for Moses.

Charley Keller walloped two homers for the Yankees yesterday to boost his season total to 31. Unfortunately, from his standpoint, York likewise smashed out a couple of roundtrippers for Detroit against the Boston Red Sox, thus retaining the home run lead with 33.

Keller's roundtrippers helped the Yankees to a double win over the Cleveland Indians, 3 to 2 and 6 to 5 in 10 innings.

York belted his pair in a lost cause as the Tigers dropped a double-header to the Red Sox, 3 to 2 and 6 to 2. Jim Tabor connected for a 10th inning homer to win the opener. The veteran Tommy Bridges suffered his fourth straight loss in the nightcap.

After taking a 15-3 lacing in the first game, the Washington Senators rallied to beat the White Sox 5 to 2, to split a twin bill. Case swiped his three bases in this game.

In the National League the Cincinnati Reds came up with two neat four-hit pitching performances on the part of Elmer Riddle and ohmy Vander Meer to beat the Boston Braves twice, 2 to 0 and 1 to 0.

Howie Krist continued his mastery over the Phillies as the Cards split with the Philadelphia Club. Krist pitched a 4 to 1 victory in the opener, but the Phils took the nightcap, 3 to 2, in 11 innings of George Munger's wild pitch.

The Brooklyn Dodgers divided a bargain bill with the Chicago Cubs. Claude Passeau hurled a five-hitter for the Cubs in the opener, but lost, 5 to 1. Bill Nicholson paced the Cubs to a 5 to 3 triumph in the nightcap by hitting a double and his 27th homer of the season.

After Bob Klinger shut them out, 5 to 0, in the opener, the New York Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4 to 3, in 10 innings to gain a split for the day.

The St. Louis Browns swept a doubleheader from the luckless Athletics, 3 to 1 and 1 to 0.

One game already has been booked with the Bunker Hill Naval Training Station of Peru, Ind.

Deer Hunters Get Permits Before Long

The few deer hunters in Fayette County who are interested in the open season on deer in Scioto, Pike and Adams counties December 6 to 18, can obtain their permits in the near future.

Hunting in the three counties will be for buck deer only, having antlers 4 or more inches in length and hunting will be permitted only between the hours of 8 A. M. and 5 P. M. with shot-guns loaded with No. 4 buckshot or larger shot, pellets, slugs, or balls and by bow and barbed arrow only.

Each deer hunter, whether required by law to have a hunting license or not, must obtain a deer hunting permit which will entitle the holder to not more than one deer during the season. This permit, conservation officials said, will allow the hunter to hunt on any of the lands in the three counties when permission has been obtained from the landowner. Those who wish to hunt on the approximately 60,000 acres of state-owned lands known as the Roosevelt-Shawnee State Hunting Preserve must "check in" at checking stations at the main entrance of the Roosevelt Game Preserve, near Portsmouth, where the first 625 (ratio or approximately one hunter for each 100 acres of land) in line each day during the 12-day deer season will be admitted to the state lands on a special controlled hunting area permit. Those not wishing to hunt on these state-owned lands need not go to the checking station.

The deer hunting permits may be obtained by mail from any of the division's seven district offices or from the main offices in Columbus. The special permit for the controlled hunting areas on the state forest lands, however, will only be issued each day at the main entrance of the Roosevelt Game Preserve.

In obtaining his deer hunting license the hunter will be required to sign an agreement to the regulations for the season which include the stipulation that as a safety measure that he will wear a red hat, red coat or other red article, will not use dogs, will not shoot within 400 feet of any highway or carry a loaded gun in his car and other safety measures and other regulations.

Bucks Beaten But Bright Spots Seen

By FRITZ HOWELL
COLUMBUS, Sept. 27.—(AP)—Ohio State's battered Bucks, still a bit baffled by the 28-13 beating handed them Saturday by Iowa's Seahawks in the opening game, will try to swing over to the winning side next Saturday as they meet Missouri here.

The "Show Me" squad also was victimized Saturday, falling before Minnesota, 26 to 13, so the teams should enter the fray on even terms provided Dean Sensenbaur, Ohio's scintillating

IMPROVING BLUE LIONS ALL SET TO WORK OUT ATTACK ON HURRICANE

An improved but, nevertheless twice beaten, Blue Lion football team today was all set to start working out plays in preparation for a meeting with Wilmington at Gardner Park Friday night. The game will be the first one of the year where the championship title in the South Central League will be at stake.

While most of the fans watching last week's game with Chillicothe were in agreement that there was a marked improvement in the Lions' style of play over the opening game, it seemed evident that still greater improvement must be made if a win is to be chalked up over Wilmington this week.

Living up to their title, "the Hurricane," Coach George Houk's lads unleashed just that in downing Jackson by the overwhelming score of 61 to 6 at Wilmington. The job cut out for the Blue Lions here Friday night is magnified when it is recalled that this same Jackson team defeated Chillicothe the previous week end.

Defensively, the Lions caused the Cavaliers plenty of trouble on running plays but could not break up their passing game ef-

Two Shutouts Given Boston By the Reds

CINCINNATI, Sept. 27.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, in second-place by three games over the Brooklyn Dodgers, open a four game series with the Philadelphia Phillies today.

Following the sweep of the Boston Brave series, in which the Braves were allowed one run in 36 innings, Cincinnati manager Bill McKeehn wasn't certain who would start on the mound today. His choice lay between Clyde Shoun or Joe Beggs. Dick Conger will pitch for Philadelphia.

The Reds ended the season's dealings with Boston yesterday by handing Casey Stengel's athletes a double whitewashing, 2 to 0 and 1 to 0.

Elmer Riddle, in counting his 21st victory of the season during the opener, permitted but four hits and allowed one Brave to reach third.

The Reds scored in the fourth on Frank McCormick's double, a wild pitch by Jim Tobin and a force play at second. They got their other run in the eighth when Estel Crabtree and McCormick singled and Gee Walker hit a long fly.

Johnny Vander Meer and Nate Andrews looked horns in a pitcher's duel in the nightcap, allowing but four hits each. Vandy fanned eight and walked six.

With two out in the ninth, Andrews threw a fast ball across the middle of the play-er to Walker who smashed it over the left field fence for the only score of the game.

freshman ball-toter from Uhrichville, is able to play.

Sensenbaur, wing-footed halfback, suffered an injured hand in the Seahawk fray, but trainer Ernie Biggs said the left halfback would be able to practice this week. Should he be shelved, his duties will be taken over by Bob McQuade, 156-pound Columbus youth, who tossed the pass for Ohio's second touchdown in the last half-minute of Saturday's contest.

The Seahawks, taking full advantage of their professional talent and Ohio's inadequate pass defense, gained three touchdowns through the air and one on a great run by Dick Todd, formerly with the Washington Redskins, to pile up a 28 to 0 edge. Then Sensenbaur broke loose for a touchdown run, and McQuade's pass to Gene Clark, sub end from Columbus, gave the Bucks their 13.

fectively. The outcome of the contest was not assured until late in the last quarter when the second touchdown was scored via the aerial route.

The Lions' chances for victory over Wilmington probably will depend on Coach Jerry Kissell's ability to mold a strong running attack. Thus far the need for better blocking has been evident on many occasions. Rudduck, always a potential threat when he has the ball, needs someone to get out in front and clear a path. That work, of necessity, must be done quickly, because the 134-pound fullback starts fast so that the hole must be there when he hits the line of scrimmage. O'Brien demonstrated Friday night that he can be relied on for his share of the ball carrying and chuck a few passes in between times. Kinzer, on the few chances he had, showed improved speed in hitting the line.

But the most encouraging feature of the Lion-Cavalier tilt was the performance of the revamped line. With a few exceptions there seemed to be a definitely more aggressive spirit on both the offensive and the defensive. Putting Swartz back at his tackle position bolstered up the defensive play. Captain Dick Kelly at center was all over the field, and together with Kellough, stopped many a Cavalier attempt to run through the guard position. The ends, too, seemed to have "found" their positions more naturally as they broke up many attempted end sweeps in the second half by piling into the mass interference.

Following Friday's game Coach Kissell indicated that he would put Curry in the backfield at the fullback position. He had been used there early in practice but after his knee started giving him trouble it was thought that line play would not aggravate it so much. In recent days it has come along nicely so that it seems likely that he may start against Wilmington Friday night. With Curry in the backfield Rudduck would be moved over to a half-back spot.

GRAIN MARKET NEWS SUMMARY

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—AP—Buying of oats developed toward the close in the grain pits today, pushing the December contract up fractionally to a new high for the season. Strength in oats brought some buying into wheat and rye, which were weak early.

Traders watched with considerable interest the Winnipeg wheat market, where prices were firm, since advice to local houses said directors of that exchange were meeting to discuss the recent rise in wheat prices in the domination.

At the close oats were 1/2-3/4 higher. December 76 3/4-3/8, wheat was unchanged to 1/2 lower; December 14 3/8-1/4, and rye was 1/2 lower to 3/4 higher, December 10 1/2-1/4.
